Rebekah Waggoner began her formal musical training at the age of three with Suzuki violin and then with traditional piano at age five, studying under Joyce Goodwin.

She graduated Magna Cum Laude from Bob Jones University with a degree in Piano Performance. She studied under Alice Gingery and David Lehman, receiving a scholarship for excellence in collaborative playing.

Rebekah has completed all seven levels of piano certification with Suzuki Association of the Americas (Nightingale Chen, Katherine Monsour Barley, Joan Krzywicki). She has served as Co-President of the Greater Philadelphia Suzuki Association (GPSA) and accompanies for their area events.

Besides maintaining a thriving private studio in the Philadelphia region for the past 15 years, Rebekah is also a collaborative pianist, working with many local teachers and schools. A sought after accompanist, Rebekah is known for her expertise in working with young musicians.

A dedicated church musician, Rebekah frequently accompanies for worship services, coordinates special musical events and performs solos, in ensembles and as an accompanist. Rebekah enjoys performing pieces by living composers and giving home concerts with her musical family. Her husband, Joseph, is a vocalist and conductor and their four children play piano, guitar, violin, and cello.
